As of 7:00 AM, California Interagency Incident Management Team 4 has taken command of the Line Fire, and Team 11 is returning home.

CURRENT SITUATION:

Yesterday, the fire experienced a wind test greater than the days prior, and all lines held well. Firefighters continued to reinforce containment lines and utilized aircraft where appropriate to address interior hotspots. In addition, crews continued to monitor, backhaul equipment, implement the suppression repair plan.

Today, crews will continue suppression repair on both the north and south of the incident. On the west side of the fire, patrol and mop up will continue. To the north, firefighters will construct direct line on the fire's edge where possible and continue to monitor the area in Bear Creek as well as Siberia Creek to ensure it stays within the current footprint. On the east side, crews will continue to patrol and mop up and backhaul excess equipment. In the southeastern area, firefighters will continue to patrol and mop up and monitor any hotspot within the fire perimeter.

WEATHER:

Mainly high clouds will begin to move over the Line Fire today and continue to increase through the day Friday. High temperatures today will be similar to yesterday, before falling another 5 degrees by Saturday. Even so, temperatures will remain well above normal for this time of year. The gradual cooling will continue through early next week. We will only experience very slow improvements to relative humidity, remaining low during the day with only poor to moderate recoveries at night. After another breezy afternoon today, winds will start to weaken Saturday and Sunday.
