Fire Size: approximately 3,700 acres at 30% containment

Personnel: 732

Location: approximately 5 miles southwest of Lone Pine, California

Structures Destroyed: 2 residential, 6 outbuildings

Structures Damaged: 3 outbuildings

Start date: October 30, 2024

Cause: undetermined

Unified Command agencies: U.S. Forest Service, CAL FIRE – BDU, Inyo County Sheriff, Lone Pine Fire Protection District

Current Situation:

Firefighters worked overnight to further the work of initial attack resources and secure containment lines up to 10 percent of the Horseshoe Fire's perimeter. There has been no new significant growth on this fire, as the winds have died down substantially. Although fire weather is predicted to be calmer than yesterday, firefighters are not letting their guard down and will continue attacking this fire aggressively with all resources available.

Firefighters were successful in constructing containment lines all along the eastern edge of the fire, and will continue in their progress moving uphill on the northern and southern edges of the fire's perimeter. The most challenging area of the fire remains on the western edge in the steepest terrain. Here, it is not possible to insert firefighters on the ground so operations will be focusing air resources here, such as helicopters and air tankers if necessary.

The damage assessment team has determined that two homes and six outbuildings were destroyed in this fire, and three outbuildings were damaged, all located within the De La Cour Ranch.

Evacuations have not changed since yesterday.
