Current Situation: Calmer overnight and early morning winds reduced fire activity allowing firefighters to make good progress in securing containment lines. Overnight, fire activity was limited to smoldering, creeping, and rollouts in heavy fuels. Crews remain focused on tactical patrols, mop-up, and addressing smoke and heat sources within the fire's interior, particularly along the northern perimeter. Today, air support continues to be used to extinguish inaccessible hot spots, aiding containment efforts. Urban Search and Rescue resources have completed a total of 8,628 inspections (92% complete). Fire suppression repairs and rapid watershed assessments to identify risks to life, property, and infrastructure from debris flows, flooding, and rockfall hazards are in progress.

Weather: Mild winds are expected today, and low humidity will keep conditions dry. Moist marine air and moderate onshore winds will build Friday into the weekend with a return to dry conditions next week.

Damage Assessment: Damage estimates from remote sensing technologies indicate over 7,000 structures may have been damaged or destroyed. While this is a preliminary estimate, the number of structures damaged and destroyed listed at the top of this page have been verified by on-the-ground damage inspection teams. Damage inspection teams have completed inspections for 60% of all structures within the fire footprint.
