Current Situation: Air Operations continue to support firefighters by extinguishing hot spots in steep, inaccessible terrain near Winters Creek, Mt. Lowe, & Mt. Wilson. Urban Search and Rescue (USAR) operations are nearly complete. Infrastructure groups assisted with clearing roadways and storm drains to ensure the safety of both personnel and equipment working throughout the communities along the southern flank of the fire. Fire suppression repair is currently underway, focusing on restoring and repairing infrastructure damaged during firefighting operations. Watershed assessments are being conducted to identify potential risks to life, property, and infrastructure, particularly from hazards like debris flows and flooding.

Weather: The marine influence will gradually recede through Sunday, leading to critical fire weather Monday afternoon into Tuesday. Very dry conditions with low relative humidity and strong northeast winds are predicted. The National Weather Service has high confidence in Red Flag conditions from Monday evening into Tuesday.

Damage Assessment: Damage inspection teams have completed inspections for 95% of all structures within the fire perimeter.
